2026 DRAFT ORDER CHALLENGE — RESULT

This is the order in which managers choose their draft slot — not the slot itself. Two games, each weighted equally. Full working shown below so nobody has to take anyone's word for it.

SELECTION ORDER

01	Steven Shuldman	MARALAGO Waffle House
02	Jack Meehan	K1 · Q2	17
03	Scott Pender	K3 · Q1	16
04	Clint Botway	K2 · Q4	14
05	Kofi White	K4 · Q8	8
06	Tony DiNardo	K5 · Q7	8
07	Megan McLoughlin	K6 · Q6	8
08	Michael Airosus	K7 · Q5	8
09	JJ Woolley	K9 · Q3	8
10	Tim DeVaney	K8 · Q9	3
11	unassigned — did not play
12	unassigned — did not play

Steven Erbrick and Joe Manganelli did not take part. Slots 11 and 12 are theirs to settle between them.

HOW THE NUMBER WAS REACHED

> Nine managers played, so finishing first in a game is worth 9 points and finishing ninth is worth 1. In other words `points = 10 − your place`. Add your Kahoot points to your Quiplash points. Highest total picks earliest.

Raw scores are deliberately not added together. Kahoot pays around a thousand points per question and Quiplash pays a hundred per vote, so summing them would let the trivia decide the whole draft and make the second game decorative. Using places gives both games identical weight.

MANAGER	KAHOOT PLACE	PTS	QUIPLASH PLACE	PTS	TOTAL
Jack Meehan	1st	9	2nd	8	17
Scott Pender	3rd	7	1st	9	16
Clint Botway	2nd	8	4th	6	14
Kofi White	4th	6	8th	2	8
Tony DiNardo	5th	5	7th	3	8
Megan McLoughlin	6th	4	6th	4	8
Michael Airosus	7th	3	5th	5	8
JJ Woolley	9th	1	3rd	7	8
Tim DeVaney	8th	2	9th	1	3

> Why the middle bunched up. A total is `20 − (Kahoot place + Quiplash place)`, so anyone whose two places add to the same number scores the same. Kofi 4+8, Tony 5+7, Megan 6+6, Airosus 7+5 and JJ 9+3 all add to twelve. Five mirror images of one another: strong in one game, weak in the other, cancelling exactly.

Five managers tied on 8. The tie-break is the better Kahoot finish, which is why the shaded block runs Kofi, Tony, Megan, Airosus, JJ — their Kahoot places were 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 9th. Jack and Scott pulled clear by placing top three in both games; everyone in the tie was strong in one and weak in the other.

SOURCE RESULTS

KAHOOT	NICKNAME	SCORE
1	Jacqui	15,035
2	Clitbutt	12,888
3	Scott 2	12,415
4	Kofi	10,756
5	Big Ton	10,668
6	Meg	10,638
7	Airosus	6,801
8	Vane	3,445
9	Scott	0

QUIPLASH	MANAGER	VOTES
1	Scott Pender	2,300
2	Jack Meehan	1,800
3	JJ Woolley	1,800
4	Clint Botway	1,700
5	Michael Airosus	1,400
6	Megan McLoughlin	1,300
7	Tony DiNardo	1,100
8	Kofi White	800
9	Tim DeVaney	800

Two Quiplash ties were broken arbitrarily. Jack Meehan and JJ Woolley both finished on 1,800 votes; Kofi White and Tim DeVaney both finished on 800. The app ranked each pair by the order they joined the game, which is not a tie-break so much as an accident of who tapped their name first. It matters: had JJ taken 2nd on that 1,800, he would score 9 instead of 8 and sit 4th outright, clear of the five-way tie, with Jack dropping to 16 and level with Scott.

One Kahoot entry worth flagging. The 9th-place Kahoot entry is nicknamed “Scott” and scored zero, with no correct answers and two questions unanswered — while Scott Pender played as “Scott 2” and finished 3rd. That zero was assigned to JJ Woolley. If it was in fact his, the table stands. If JJ never joined the Kahoot, his 9th place is a placeholder rather than a result, and moving him up even one place would lift him above others in the tie. Worth settling before anyone picks.

WHY SHULDMAN PICKS FIRST

Steven Shuldman did not play either game and did not need to. Under MAGA MARALAGO, an Ibanez who completes the Waffle House challenge — twenty-four continuous hours, one hour off the clock per breakfast item — earns the first selection of the following draft outright. He completed it. The challenge above decided selections two through twelve only.

The challenge itself was proposed by the reigning champion under MAD DIC DOC and was not overruled within forty-eight hours, so it stood without a vote.
